PLTC's Philosophy

"Long-Term Care" Evolves

The concept of "long-term care" (LTC) is changing rapidly. No longer a function of location in which services are provided, LTC suggests a range of supportive services provided over an extended period of time to meet an individual’s psychological, spiritual and physical health care needs.

PLTC member roles vary on a "long-term care continuum", ranging from home-based primary care “house calls”, to services provided in hospitals, skilled nursing facilities and other care centers. With a rapidly growing segment of younger adults needing supportive care, the age range in LTC has expanded considerably, requiring an augmented role for PLTC members and other professionals providing care for these individuals.

We function in a variety of clinical, academic, and government settings in both urban and rural areas across the United States and Canada. We hope to further expand our member outreach to include additional colleagues and friends across the globe.

Regardless of a patient's age or residential location, PLTC members strive to provide respectful, culturally appropriate, empirically based, equitable and "person-centered" care to all, in an effort to optimize patient, family and staff harmony and quality of life.
